"...it's not just inspiring, it is essential."
 -David Myhan, Boston Globe

"Strong At the Broken Places" is a 38 minute documentary about people devastated by trauma and loss who find common ground in their journeys to recovery. It is the story of vastly different lives, but the death camps of Cambodia, the violent streets of South Boston, the amputee ward of a VA hospital and the cell of an alcohol and drug addicted inmate yield remarkable survivors, all of whom heal themselves by helping others.

Their stories are both inspirational and instructional, helping to infuse the word "hero" with meaning for our daily lives. Most of us have or will face serious trauma in our lives. As one of the people in the documentary explains, "Sooner or later life breaks us all, but with courage, hope and the support of people who care, many become strong at the broken places."

"It is inspiring to see the recognition of these people's ability to stop the cycles of violence and trauma that could have destroyed their lives... this documentary can serve as a personal call to action, and how one person through their own personal transformation can inspire others to join them in changing an entire community."
 -Dr. Barry Krisberg,
 President National Council on Crime & Delinquency
